COVID-19 RESOURCES FROM AIM PARTNERS

We would like to take the time to acknowledge and thank those of you who are working so diligently on the COVID-19 crisis, whether your teams are on the front lines, or working behind the scenes. We appreciate all of you and the work being done to keep our communities safe and healthy. Below are some resources that may be beneficial to your teams. Please feel free to circulate these resources amongst your members, community organizations and hospitals. Please click on the images below to be re-directed to the resources.

MHLIC Inaugural Newsletter - April 2020

Welcome

Welcome to the Maternal Health Learning & Innovation Center's inaugural newsletter! Our Center serves as a national resource to accelerate innovation and evidence-informed practices, connecting innovators from across the country who strive to reduce maternal morbidity and mortality. With equity as the cornerstone of all our services, we directly support HRSA's nine State Maternal Health Innovation program award recipients and three Rural Maternity and Obstetrics Management Strategies program award recipients using a capacity-building assistance model. The Center also serves as a national hub to catalog and disseminate best practices related to maternal health improvement.

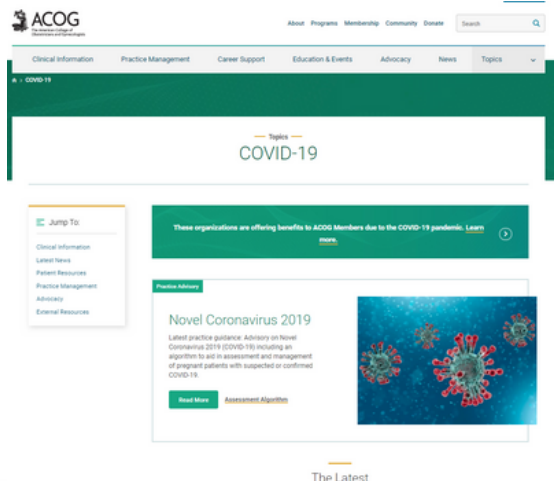

Comprised of a multidisciplinary team of capacity-building and maternal health experts from around the country with a central hub at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, we work in partnership with the HRSA award recipients in the areas of engagement, innovation support and policy. In this new time in which we are living, our team of over 35 professionals stands ready to do all we can to support your work and protect America's mothers and babies.

Leadership in the Storm

We are living in a very unusual time. The challenges faced in the maternal health arena have really come to the foreground - mental health care, lactation support, access to services, postpartum education and support, and birth justice. COVID-19 has shown how decentralized our states and health care systems are and how challenging working as one nation is. Guidelines are interpreted differently leading to real confusion on issues such as mother / baby separation and the role that professionals like doulas play on health care teams.

While service provision is changing rapidly, the emergence of billing mechanisms for telehealth
